THOMAS, Gabriel.

An Historical and Geographical Account of the Province and Country of Pensilvania; and of West-New-Jersey in America. . . . With a Map of both Countries.

London, for A. Baldwin, 1698.

Octavo, 56 leaves, last blank and genuine; engraved folding map, title page for first and for second part; bound with three other tracts in old half vellum.

This in an important one of the numerous works written to stimulate interest in immigration to the New World. It paints an alluring picture of a land where the poor could improve their economic condition so as to live "without either begging or stealing."

WOLLEY, Charles.

A two Years Journal in New-York: And part of its Territories in America.

London, for Dickenson Boys in Lowth, and George Barton in Boston, 1701.

Octavo, 56 leaves, with half title, original sheep in dark brown morocco case.

Second edition, identical with the first published the same year, with the corrected sheet C, except for the title page.

"The work was written by Charles Wolley, or Wooley, a clergyman of the Church of England, who accompanied Sir Edmund Andros to New York in 1678. He officiated as chaplain at the Fort until his return to England, July, 1680. His little volume, written after his return to England, but not published until 1701, presents an interesting account of New York at the end of the seventeenth century. . . . He gives considerable space to an account of the Indians. Speaking of land, he says that it could be bought 'in my time at two-pence or three-pence the Acre, for which they have a good Patent or Deed from the Governor.' "—Church.

Journal Historique du dernier voyage que feu M. de la Sale fit dans le Golfe de Mexique, pour trouver l'embouchure, & le cours de la Riviere de Missicipi, nommée à present la Riviere de Saint Loüis, qui traverse la Louisiane. Où l'on voit l'Histoire tragique de sa mort, & plusieurs choses curieuses du nouveau monde.

Paris, Estienne Robinot, 1713.

12mo, 210 leaves, large folding map; blue morocco by Rousselle.

First edition. According to Sabin: "This curious relation was the last which the public received of the unfortunate expedition in which La Sale was assassinated by some of his men, March 19, 1687. . . . Mr. Parkman remarks: 'Of the three narratives of this journey, those of Joutel, Cavelier and Douay, the first is by far the best. That of Cavelier seems to be the work of a man of confused brain and indifferent memory. Joutel's account is of a very different character and seems to be the work of an honest and intelligent man. Douay's account is brief, but it agrees with that of Joutel in most essential points.' France and England in North America, III, page 356."

John Carter Brown Catalogue: "Charlevoix, who knew Joutel, in speaking of him says: 'He was a very upright man, and the only one of La Sale's party on whom that explorer could rely. Joutel accordingly rendered him important services. He complained that in retouching his work they had somewhat altered it, but it does not appear that they made any essential changes.'—Hist. of New France."

Church: "This work was written by Joutel to counteract, in part, the statements of Tonti's Dernières Découvertes . . . de M. de la Sale, Paris, 1697, which, though it appeared under Tonti's name, was disowned by him . . . The map which accompanies the work was designed by Joutel and is the first to give the results of the last two voyages of La Salle. It gives a very correct representation of the course of the Mississippi as far as its mouth."

CLAESSE, LAWRENCE.

The Morning and Evening Prayer, The Litany, Church Catechism, Family Prayers, and Several Chapters of the Old and New-Testament, Translated into the Mahaque Indian Language.

New York, William Bradford, 1715.

Quarto, 72 leaves, title pages in English and in Indian, the catechism between pages 40 and 41; original calf in half blue slip case.

"This is the first Mohawk Prayer Book, and the earliest known book printed in an Indian dialect in New York. Excepting the English title page and headings to the prayers, it is wholly in the Mohawk language. . . . This translation is based upon that of the Rev. Bernardus Freeman, who ministered to the Indians after the departure of the Rev. Thoroughgood Moore. He presented a copy of this translation to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. When, in 1712, the Rev. William Andrews was sent as a missionary to these Indians, a copy was sent to him with instructions to print a part in Indian and distribute it among the Indians. Claesse, who was a good interpreter and frequently visited the Onondagas, probably revised and added to the original translation."—Church.

"This interesting volume is a fine specimen of Bradford's printing; and the impressions having been chiefly distributed among the Indians, and by them destroyed, it has become a book of almost matchless rarity."—Sabin.

Indian Treaty.

A Conference of His Excellency Jonathan Belcher, Esq; Captain General and Governour in Chief of His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts-Bay in New-England, with Edewakenk Chief Sachem of the Penobscut Tribe, Loron one of the Chief Captains of the same Tribe, Toxus Chief Sachem of the Norridgewock Tribe, Adiawando Chief Sachem of the Pigwacket Tribe, and Medaganesset Chief Sachem of the Amerescoggin Tribe, with other Chief Men of the said Indian Tribes, at Falmouth in Casco-Bay, July 1732.

Boston, B. Green, 1732.

Quarto, 12 leaves, slip of errata pasted on the last page; red morocco.

First edition. Another edition, undated, was printed in London the same year.

"One cannot read this treaty and not be struck with the difference between the methods used with these Eastern Indians and the method followed by New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia with the Six Nations and kindred tribes. All these latter conferences and treaties were marked by great dignity and the following of set forms. No speech ever went unanswered and it was seldom answered the same day but only after taking time for deliberation. At Falmouth, Governor Belcher replied to the Indian speeches at once and pressed the Indians for immediate answers. They told him they did things only after deliberating among themselves, but it made no difference to the Governor, nor did he mark his answers with presents as the Indians did."—DePuy.

M. T. Cicero's Cato Major, or his Discourse of Old-Age: With Explanatory Notes.

Philadelphia, B. Franklin, 1744.

Octavo, 84 leaves; brown morocco.

First edition, first issue.

This volume has been called by many authorities the finest production of Franklin's press, and perhaps the finest eighteenth century printing in America. It was translated by Chief-Justice James Logan, who is called, in the Church catalogue, "next to Penn and Franklin the most important character in the early history of Pennsylvania."

Franklin, in his preface, calls it "the first translation of a classic in this Western World," which is an error. Sandys' translation of Ovid, made in Virginia about ninety years earlier, was printed and published in London. Keimer had published a translation of Epictetus in 1739, in Philadelphia; and Franklin himself had printed Cato's Moral Distiches in 1735, which translation is also attributed to James Logan.

The Portuguese translation of Sir William Johnson's "Letter dated Camp at Lake George, Sept. 9, 1755, to the Governours of the several Colonies who raised the troops on the present Expedition; giving an account of the action of the preceding day."

In 1755 a four-fold blow was planned against the French in North America. Braddock was to lead an expedition against Fort Duquesne, Shirley against Niagara, Col. William Johnson against Crown Point, and Lieut. Col. Monckton against Acadia. This present relation is concerned with the third mentioned expedition and with the defeat of the French at Lake George.

Johnson, in July 1755, had collected a force of 3000 near Albany—farmers from New England, the New Hampshire Regiment, some men from New York and Rhode Island, and about 300 Mohawks. With this force he moved up the Hudson to a spot called the Great Carrying Place, where Fort Lyman was being built, thence on towards Lake George. Meanwhile the French Canadian forces under Baron Dieskau advanced from Ticonderoga in an attempt to seize Fort Lyman. Three miles from this place they learned of the movement of the English forces, and Dieskau planned a trap. The English scouting column under Lieut. Col. Whiting fell into this trap and was nearly wiped out. The survivors fell back on the main camp, which had been warned by the firing, and was on the defensive. Dieskau's force got out of control, attacked the English camp in a disorganized manner, and was repulsed. Both Johnson and Dieskau were wounded, and Lyman took over Johnson's command. After about four hours of fighting the English forces made a general assault on the Canadians and their Indian allies, drove them

Lisbon, [Domingos Gonsalves], 1758.

Quarto, 4 leaves, brown morocco by Rivière.

Curious view of the siege on the title.

When the four-fold blow against the French was planned for 1755, William Pitt was especially desirous of capturing Louisbourg, practically the key to the Great West: Canada, Quebec, Ticonderoga, and Fort Duquesne. An expedition sent out in 1757 failed to attain its object owing to various delays, and much more important preparations were made for the next year.

In the early days of 1758 two British fleets put to sea, one under Admiral Boscawen, destined for Louisbourg; the other, under Admiral Osborn, sailed to intercept Admiral LaClue's fleet, approaching to relieve Cape Breton Island. On June 2 the fleet neared Louisbourg, and after great difficulty landed some soldiers under the command of Amherst and Wolfe. After a desperate siege the town surrendered, on July 27, 1758, when the entire French force was made prisoner.

Quakers.

An Account of a Visit Lately made to the People Called Quakers In Philadelphia, by Papoonahoal, An Indian Chief, And several other Indians, chiefly of the Minisink Tribe. With the Substance of their Conferences on that Occasion.

London, S. Clark, 1761.

12mo, 11 leaves: A^8, B^3; old half calf.

Papoonahoal was an extraordinary Indian chief, who, in his native forests, before communication from Christian advisers had reached him, conceived the design of personal moral reform. To forward his purpose he took back to Philadelphia three white prisoners and several stolen horses which he had purchased from hostile tribes. "The most remarkable of all the addresses by American Indians, was made by him to the Governor, who offered him a considerable, and to the chief very valuable amount of goods, as a present. The dignified and noble reply, in which he declined to receive them, on the ground that his visit was entirely for religious instruction, and therefore of too sacred a character to admit of the gross indulgence of personal desires, is worthy of a place on the same page with the most renowned sayings of the heroes of antiquity."—Field.

Ponteach: or the Savages of America. A Tragedy.

London, for the author to be sold by J. Millan, 1766.

Octavo, 55 leaves: A-G^{8}, G8 blank and missing; red morocco.

Major Robert Rogers gained celebrity in the French and Indian Wars as the leader of "Rogers's Rangers." "In 1766 he was appointed Governor of Michilimackinac;" Sabin says, "and, accused of a plot to plunder his own fort and join the French, was sent to Montreal in irons." He seems to have been a scalawag in all his subsequent career. He was a loyalist during the Revolution. See Parkman's Conspiracy of Pontiac, I, 164; II, 321-357.

Mexico, August 16, 1770.

Octavo, 4 leaves; unbound, in brown morocco solander case.

The earliest printed account of the Spanish occupation of Northern California, and of Portola's expedition to Monterey and San Francisco. Two issues, both with same date, but the other, a folio, has been considered the earlier.

Wagner, 150 (2): "Mr. R. E. Cowan, in his Bibliography of California, says that the quarto edition is the second edition, but I have never been able to discover any contemporary statement as to which was printed first. They were probably printed at the same time, the folio being for official circulation, and the quarto for public circulation. We have Palau's statement that it was issued for public circulation."

After the beginning was fairly made at Monterey, Portola turned over the new settlement to Fages, and with Costano departed for the South. His despatches reached Mexico City August 10, 1770, and the news in them was received with great joy and celebrations. Six days later the viceroy caused them to be printed in the above form.

FRENEAU, PHILIP.

The American Village, A Poem. To which are added, Several other original Pieces in Verse.

New York, S. Inslee and A. Car, 1772.

Quarto, 15 leaves; stitched, wholly uncut, in red box case.

First edition of Freneau's first book. It is a parody of Goldsmith's Deserted Village.

Freneau was only twenty years old when, in 1772, he wrote to his friend and classmate, James Madison: "I have printed a poem in New York called the American Village, containing about 450 Lines, also a few short pieces added: I would send you one if I had a proper opportunity—the additional poems are,—1. a Poem to the Nymph I never saw—The miserable Life of a Pedagogue—and Stanzas on an ancient Dutch house on Long Island—As to the main poem it is damned by all good and judicious judges—my name is in the title page, this is called Vanity by some—but 'who so fond as youthful bards of fame?' "

The book, however, was unknown to bibliographers until November, 1902, when a copy was found in a volume of miscellaneous pamphlets purchased by the Library of Congress.

Inslee and Car, who printed the volume, were in business only from 1770 to early in 1773, and very few works from their press are in existence.

Reprinted, 1906, by the Club for Colonial Reprints of Providence, Rhode Island, with an introduction by Harry Lyman Koopman and bibliographical data by Victor Hugo Paltsits.

ALLEN, ETHAN.

A Vindication of the Opposition of the Inhabitants of Vermont to the Government of New-York, and of their Right to form into an Independent State. Humbly submitted to the Consideration of the impartial World.

[Dresden], Alden Spooner, 1779.

Octavo, 86 leaves; unbound, in red morocco case. Lower edges uncut.

One of the earliest official publications of Vermont. Before the introduction of printing into Vermont, the inhabitants had their printing done at Hartford, and were dependent upon the columns of the Connecticut Courant for carrying on the controversy with New York respecting the title to the present territory of Vermont.

Alden Spooner, printer of this work, removed from Norwich, Connecticut to Dresden (now Hanover, New Hampshire) then a part of Vermont, in 1778, and began printing there in the fall of 1778. A proclamation of Governor Chittenden, October, 1778, is the first work from his press.

St. Petersburg, Johann Zacharias Logan, 1793.

Octavo, 42 leaves: A-E^{8}, F^{2}; original marbled boards, in dark red half morocco case.

The Russian Merchant's First and Second Journeys from Ochotsk in Siberia across the Eastern Ocean to the Coast of America in the years 1783 and 1789. With a circumstantial account of the Islands newly discovered by him, Küktak, Afagnak and many others, which even the famous Capt. Cook had not reached and which the Russian company have.

This St. Petersburg edition of Schelikof's famous Merchant's Journeys to America is, according to Bancroft, the chief authority for this period in northwest history. Schelikof was the most remarkable and active figure in Russian America. He and his talented wife, Natalia, founded the Schelikof Fur Company, where exploration went hand in hand with commercial expansion. After his death in 1799, the company was reorganized as the Russian American Fur Company.

LEWIS, MERIWETHER, and CLARK, WILLIAM.

History of the Expedition under the Command of Captains Lewis and Clark, to the Sources of the Missouri River, thence across the Rocky Mountains and Down the River Columbia to the Pacific Ocean, during the years 1804, 1805 and 1806.

Philadelphia, Bradford and Inskeep; New York, Abm. H. Inskeep, 1814.

2 volumes, octavo, 250 and 266 leaves, with two plates and one map in the first volume and three plates in the second; original printed covers, uncut and partly unopened, in green case.

Church says: "It was the intention of Lewis and Clark to publish their journals soon after their return from their expedition, and Lewis went so far as to issue a prospectus of the work, announcing its speedy publication. They both, not long after this, received Government appointments the onerous duties of which prevented the carrying out of this plan. Urged by Jefferson to proceed with the work, Lewis started for Washington to take up his editorial task, when he lost his life on the journey. Clark, the survivor, prompted by Jefferson to seek an editor for the work, selected Nicholas Biddle, who, after some hesitation, engaged to take it up, giving himself almost completely to the task. On July 8, 1811, he wrote Clark that he had completed the work according to his agreement and was ready to go to press. Just before going to press, however, Biddle was elected to the legislature. Being thus prevented from giving the work his full attention, he engaged Paul Allen, a Philadelphia newspaper writer, to supervise its issue. Biddle modestly determined to claim no credit for his portion of the work. Allen, on the other hand, claimed as much credit as possible, and thus secured an admirable memoir from Jefferson.

An edition of 2000 copies was printed, of which 583 were in some way lost or destroyed. The success of the book, which has long been regarded as a classic in American history, was due almost entirely to Biddle's careful preparation of the narrative, Allen's part consisting merely of the more mechanical work of the press-revision and proof-reading. The original journals of the expedition were published under the editorship of Reuben Gold Thwaites, secretary of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, by Dodd, Mead & Company, New York, 1904-1905, 8 VOLS. 8 VO."

Wacousta; or The Prophecy: A Tale of the Canadas. . . . By the Author of "Écarté." In three volumes.

London, T. Cadell; and Edinburgh, W. Blackwood, 1832.

3 volumes, 12mo; original green cloth, paper labels. Inserted after the titlepage of Volume I is a sheet: To the King's most excellent Majesty, signed, on verso: The Author.

First edition. A remarkable study of life among the Canadian Indians in the early days. The story is founded upon incidents connected with the attempt on Fort Detroit by the famous Indian chief, Pontiac, in the year 1736. The conspiracy of this wily and treacherous warrior to possess himself of the various posts held by the English in the west, was foiled of complete success, it is said, only because a beautiful Indian girl who had formed an attachment for one of the garrison's officers, forewarned the commandant at Detroit. This tale constitutes the main plot, about which is woven a story filled with romantic and thrilling situations, vivid descriptive passages, and rapidity of action enough to satisfy the most avid adventure-story reader. It has often been reprinted.

HARRISON, Lieutenant E. J.

The Thrilling, Startling and Wonderful Narrative of Lieutenant Harrison, who was taken prisoner at Goliad, Texas, in 1836, and only escaped the treacherous murder of his companions by the inhuman Mexicans, to be transferred to a Punishment worse than death, namely, The Mines of Mexico; From which he succeeded in making his escape, and subsequently joining Col. Doniphan's Command, on its way from California across the Mountains, by which means he again reached the United States. Etc.

PROCLAMATION.

BY THE GOVERNOR OF THE TERRITORY OF OREGON.

In pursuance of an Act of Congress, approved August 14th, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty eight, to establish the Territorial Government of Oregon:—

I, JOSEPH LANE, Governor of the Territory of Oregon, do hereby declare and make known, that an election will be held on the first Monday in June next, (1849) at the several places appointed by authority of the laws of the late provisional Government, of the Territory, in the several counties in said Territory, for the purpose of electing one delegate to the Congress of the United States.

And, at the same time and places, for the election of members to the Council and House of Representatives of the Legislature of said Territory, and that the several counties as laid off, by the laws of the late provisional Government of said Territory, are entitled to and shall elect the following number of members to the Council to wit:—

The counties of Clatsop, Lewis and Vancouver, one member of the Council, the counties of Tuality, Yamhill, Polk, Benton, and Linn, one member of the Council, each, and the counties of Champoeg and Clackamas one member of the Council each, and one member of the Council jointly.

The counties of Clatsop, Lewis and Vancouver, one Representative, the counties of Tuality, Polk, Benton, and Linn, two Representatives, each, and the counties of Yamhill, Champoeg, and Clackamas, three Representatives, each.

In case there should be no Judges of election appointed under the Territorial law, now in force, or, if there be no Judges present at the place of voting, then the voters present shall elect their Judges, and the Judges shall appoint their clerks. Both Judges and clerks before entering upon the discharge of their duties, shall, take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and the law of Congress "to establish the Territorial Government of Oregon" and faithfully to discharge their duties as Judges and clerks of the election.

Given under my hand, at Oregon City, Oregon Territory, April the 26, 1849.

JOSEPH LANE.

Cincinnati, U. P. James, 1849.

Octavo, 32 leaves; original pictorial wrappers, in half blue morocco case.

The 112 illustrations, each with its accompanying lines of descriptive text, form a series of excellently drawn and highly amusing scenes connected with the first news of the discovery of gold in California, the preparations for departure, the hardships met on the way to the new Eldorado, life at the mines among the miners, Mormons, etc. The volume presents a complete picture of the contemporary gold fever, and is without doubt the first, as well as the most pretentious record, in typical American caricature, of the effect produced by the great discovery of 1849.

OF THE

COMMERCE OF ST. LOUIS

FOR THE YEAR 1849.

The Commercial Season of St. Louis may be said to embrace the entire year, commencing on the 1st of January and ending on the 31st of December, and in accordance with general custom it devolves upon us, at the commencement of a new commercial year, to present to the readers of the Republican a synopsis of the past season's operations. In undertaking this duty, it may be thought necessary that we should offer an apology for the delay which has attended the appearance of our statement. It was intended—and hereafter every effort will be made for this purpose—to present it to our commercial patrons on the first day of the new year. Heretofore, this has not been done. Many causes have operated to prevent it, and no reasonable hope of an improvement can be entertained until there is a complete reformation in the manner of compiling statistics, and in making the reports of city officers. It is their duty to make full and regular monthly returns to the City Register, of every thing appertaining, in their respective departments, to the improvement and commerce of the city; and without these reports it is impossible to embrace in a statement of this character, all that might prove of utility or interest. However, after the usual delay, and with considerable exertion, we have obtained an insight into the most important of these tables, and shall at once proceed to lay them before the reader, with all the accuracy and brevity possible. In speaking, as we have frequently had occasion to do, of a dereliction of duty on the part of officers connected with the commerce of St. Louis, we do not intend to include all, nor do we lay the charge of just censure upon any; for we are aware that many of them are required to perform duties which, from their very nature, and the limited means provided for assistants, &c., are laborious and exceedingly difficult. This remark will apply to several, but more particularly to the Harbor Master, who, in addition to his other duties, is required by ordinance to keep a record of the imports, exports, &c., and to make monthly returns of the same to the proper department—a duty which, we regret to state, has never been performed, and, we may add, never will be, under existing arrangements. We have had, therefore, as in years past, to rely mainly on our own exertions in compiling; and now, as heretofore, the entire import tables, as well as all other statistical matter contained in this report, has been found in a detached and unfinished condition, and by dint of hard labor they have been placed in the form here presented. It is not our wish to complain, but when such a flagrant disregard of the city laws is suffered to exist, we are forced to give an exposition of the fact, rather than apologise to our commercial patrons for what would otherwise seem remissness on our part.

In the present review, we do not design going much into detail, and a lengthy statement cannot be expected; nor do we intend to include in this all and every thing that appeared in our last, believing that a concise and comprehensive article, embracing all the leading features of trade, will be more acceptable and generally read. We shall, however, omit nothing that would be likely to impart information in regard to the extensive and constantly increasing commerce of our city. We have had, in times past, much to say of statistics and statistical information, and have tried to arouse the attention of the city authorities to the subject, but with what success may appear from what we have already written. Nevertheless, our object is not defeated. There are many reasons for this solicitude on our part, and which, no doubt, govern others who feel a like interest in the matter. Such intelligence is not only satisfactory to the merchant and dealer, but it gives tone and character to the commercial operations of our city abroad. It is also a true and never-failing index of decline, or prosperity, and there is no portion of a reading and commercial community who are not more or less interested in reliable information of this sort.

For these, and other reasons, we are pleased to see that our merchants, after years of procrastination, have decided upon having an Exchange. A suitable building has been procured in a central and convenient location; competent officers chosen, and if all the contemplated arrangements for buying, selling, &c., are fully carried into effect, more system and regularity may be anticipated in commercial transactions, or, at least, business will be conducted in a manner, and upon principles more satisfactory to all. We, therefore, hail its organization as a favorable epoch in the commercial history of our city, and one that will be likely to preserve the statistical and leading features of our commerce and be the means by which they will reach the press, and through the latter the public at large.

We have also repeatedly spoken of the great manufacturing, and commercial facilities of St. Louis, and notwithstanding the misfortunes and afflictions of the past season, all that has been said of her wealth, and constantly increasing commerce, is being daily confirmed. Not a year passes but we are called upon to note new discoveries of mineral deposits, the increase or extension of manufactures, or marked changes in her extensive intercourse with different portions of the country; and by means of a wide spread navigation, distant points, hitherto inaccessible, are being brought within the boundaries of her trade, and new commodities, either for consumption or export, are constantly arriving at her wharf. Her manufacturing interests, too, are not neglected, and a steady and uninterrupted increase of mills, foundries, machine shops, and various minor mechanical works, for the consumption of coal, iron, lead, grain, &c., are being erected, and bid fair to become permanent and profitable investments. As a commercial city, St. Louis ranks second in the West—a distinction attained within the past ten years—and if her progress is onward, as is generally conceded, ten years more will scarcely transpire before, in many of the most important branches of commerce and manufactures, she will be classed as the first.—With a population of 70,000, she has continued to increase in strength and improve in size down to the present period, and in commencing the last half of the present century it may not be thought visionary to predict that before it expires she will be in direct communication with the Lakes, the Eastern seaboard 12mo, 30 leaves; original buff printed wrappers.

First edition, the only copy known.

Dundass left Steubenville on March 24, 1849, for Independence. On April 24 the party started overland, on May 26 camped near Fort Kearny, on June 16 at Fort Laramie, crossed Big Sandy July 9, reached Salt Lake City July 21. By September 2 Dundass and a man named McConnel were travelling alone. About the 13th they reached Pleasant Valley. They finally proceeded to Stockton, from which place they boarded a schooner for a three days' journey to San Francisco, arriving November 15. Dundass became inspector of the port.

MILLER, JOAQUIN.

Specimens.

Portland, Oregon, George H. Himes, 1868.

Joaquin Miller's first book, the only copy known. He wrote it at Canyon City, and George H. Himes printed it in Portland on a half medium Gordon press. This was Himes' copy, and he has made this notation in it.

The first poem is Lona Ellah, a tale of the Rogue River war.

SPECIMENS.

PREFACE.

As these lines are printed only for a few friends, this is rather a letter to them than a preface. I anticipate your disapproval, not so much of the matter—your love for me would conceal that—but that I write at all, for you always insisted that poetry was out of place here and that rhyming was a mild type of insanity. When I came to manhood, being thus urged, because of love and respect for you, I put it aside—put it aside as you would put aside your blue-eyed children from your hearthstone, and on the rough edge of the frontier, walled from the world by the savage grandeur of the Blue Mountains, I pursued the rugged route of my profession. Then I fell ill, and down in the shadows the heart hungered after the beautiful and the soul went out after the sweet ideal, a dove on the waters, and brought these things. That is why I have written. I had intended, in connection with "Minnie Myrtle," printing quite a book, but have not time now. I take these two pieces from the collection, which suggests the name. Specimens they are, may be, "of the earth earthy," and have quartz and other things clinging to them; but I certainly believe they possess some of the pure metal, else you would not now have "Specimens."
